On this day in 1984, the Alligator River National Wildlife Refuge was established in Dare and Hyde Counties. The refuge would protect a unique forested wetland habitat called "pocosin", a term originally derived from the Native American Algonquian word for swamp on a hill, essentially a slightly elevated bog compared to its surroundings.

Maine is very rich in ski history, yet many people do not realize it nor recognize the place this history holds within the American ski world. Because of this, many of those who have valued the special spirit our sport entails are concerned this history will be lost. It is this concern which motivated the founders of the Ski Museum of Maine to organize.
